Milan Design Edit in Perspective

If there was one thing that really stood out during this year's edition of Salone del Mobile, it was not one single trend, but rather the approach of designers incorporating trends into their work: This time, there was no "either / or" – it was all about mixing and matching more than one trend within the frame work of one single product. Look closely, and you'll see this a lot browsing the following pages.

Meanwhile, the urban gardening movement is unabated and more popular than ever before – and incorporated whenever the possibility presents itself. It's about bringing nature into the homes of the customers, as shown in Milan in the most creative of ways.

To fulfill today's customers' desires – high quality, innovative designs and a cozy product feel – is the ultimate challenge every designer has to deal with. We think they are doing an amazing job!
